DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

2. Claims 12-27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. Specifically, each of the noted claims recites either a "spectrometer rotor" or a "spectrometer", but fails to positively recited any elements which would constitute, or even relate to, the structure or function of a spectrometer.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

5. Claims 1-27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Saito ('849) in view of either Ivory et al ('258) or Tolley et al ('369).

Saito discloses a method and apparatus for separation of biological material comprising a centrifugal rotor coupled with an electric field generating means, such that the hydrodynamic force of the centrifuge acts in opposition of the electromotive force applied along the length of the rotor blade. The opposing forces are controlled and applied so as to effect separation and migration of charged biological species and to capture the separated species along the length of the rotor blade at a point experiencing equilibrium of the applied forces. The method and device of Saito differ from the instant claims in that a uniform electric field is applied along the length of the rotor blade, rather than a varying field.

However, each of Ivory et al and Tolley et al disclose the alternative application of a gradient electric field, in opposition of a hydrodynamic force, in order to enhance the separation capability, as well as affording certain advantages such as minimizing effects of diffusion and facilitating separation of multiple analytes at once. It is noted that Tolley et al particularly suggest centrifugation as one applicable means for providing the opposing hydrodynamic force.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify the method and apparatus of Saito to include a varying gradient electric field, rather than a uniform field, along the length of the rotor, in order to obtain the known advantages thereof, as per the teaching of either Ivory or Tolley et al.

Drawings

6. The drawings are objected to because they include informal, hand sketches. A proposed drawing correction or corrected drawings are required in reply to the Office action to avoid abandonment of the application. The objection to the drawings will not be held in abeyance.

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure as general background information related to applicant's field of endeavor.
